June was a turbulent month for markets. Elections in Europe and the announcement of the dissolution of the French National Assembly moved European equity markets. In the US, Tech continued to drive equities higher. Against this backdrop, the S&P 500 ended the semester up 3.6% in June and 15.3% YTD, the Stoxx 600 was down 1.1% in June reaching a performance of 9.5% YTD and our fund was up 1.16% with a YTD performance of 3.84%.

Highlights of the month included Central Bank meetings, European elections, and various political debates in the US. On the Central Bank front, there were no surprises from the ECB, which cut rates as expected but with a rather hawkish message reminding us that it is dependent on future economic data. The Fed did not surprise the market neither, keeping rates at the same levels and commenting that it also remains "data dependent". The Bank of Canada began cutting rates by 25 basis points, and the SNB surprised the markets by also cutting rates by 25 basis points for the second time in a row. Rates on both sides of the Atlantic trended downwards during the month.

The big surprise this month came from the political front. The European elections took place, and the far right came out the big winner. Macron's Renaissance party was the big loser. The French President therefore decided to dissolve the French National Assembly in order to call for new elections. This decision took the European markets by surprise, with all of them correcting, especially the CAC40. In these elections, too, the far-right is likely to emerge as the big winner. After the first round, the RN won 33.15% of the vote, but this should not be enough to secure an absolute majority for the second round. This reassured the markets.

At portfolio level, our two best sectors this month were in the Technology sector. Softwares were up 13.5%, after poor guidance of Salesforce weighed on the sector at the end of May, but recovered strongly in June. Cybersecurity gained 9% over the month, buoyed by the boom in Technology growth stocks. Conversely, Clean Transportation (-30%) and Clean Energy (-10.7%) were our two worst performing sectors, following bad news on the stocks we hold in our portfolio.

Naturally, two Softwares stocks are among our best performers of the month. Servicenow gained 19.75%, while Datadog climbed 17.7%. For both stocks, this performance is explained by the rebound in Softwares after Salesforce's poor guidance, as well as the sustained performance of growth stocks thanks to the correction in interest rates during the month.

Our worst performers were Solaredge (-47%) and Alfen (-52.2%). For Solaredge, this performance was due to two announcements, the first being that one of their customers who owed them money went bankrupt, so Solaredge may never be paid an amount of around USD 10 million. The second reason is that the Israeli company has issued a convertible bond that will certainly dilute existing shareholders. As for Alfen, the company has lowered its revenue guidance for 2024 by EUR 100 million.

We did not place any orders on our fund during the month of June, but have placed Alfen and Solaredge under review and we will position ourselves after our analysis.
